The project and presentation will show one's capacity as a public theologian by demonstrating:

- knowledge of biblical themes and their contexts, articulation of one's own hermeneutic, and ability to integrate biblical themes [and/or wisdom from other religions and spiritualities] and theology with practice of leadership
- knowledge of central themes of one's faith and ability to engage in theological reflection on those themes as they relate to major challenges facing contemporary religious communities and society and the practice of ministry and leadership (nb: Christology)
- familiarity with one's denominational or faith tradition, including an historical analysis of the tradition as it relates to major challenges facing contemporary religious communities and society and the practice of ministry and leadership
- understanding of the intersection of religious faiths and contemporary culture, and how this intersection might impact one's contribution to public and pastoral leadership
- development of leadership competencies.
- ability to implement the practical skills of project development including contextual analysis, theological integration, delivery of outcomes, project evaluation, and timeliness.
- the way in which one's spiritual life bears on one's leadership
- compliance with the VST policy on research with human subjects
